1 INTRODUCTION

1.1 This Report

This report contains the findings from the 2006 Dunedin Residents' Opinion Survey. Section One contains a summary of the headline results. Section Two provides an overview of the objectives and methodology. Section Three of the report contains frequency results for all questions included in the survey questionnaire as well as analysis of the comments made by respondents. Section Four describes the demographic profile of the respondents, while Sections Five and Six contain an analysis of the results by the respondents' gender and age. Section Seven compares the results of this 2006 survey with the results from the 2003, 2004 and 2005 surveys, and Section Eight contains a copy of the questionnaire.

1.2 Background

The 2006 Residents' Opinion Survey was virtually identical to the surveys carried out in 2003, 2004 and 2005; the sample size and methodology were the same and the questionnaire was substantially the same with the only difference to the 2005 questionnaire being minor changes in wording to 5 questions, the addition of 9 new questions and the deletion of 5 questions no longer considered relevant. The reader should note that the questionnaire used since 2003 is substantially different to that used by the City Council prior to 2003.

1.3 Objectives

The survey was designed to measure residents' satisfaction with Council performance, and Council owned facilities. In addition, the survey sought to measure residents' satisfaction with Dunedin City itself and also measure residents' usage of a number of facilities. Many of the measures will be used to assess the extent to which the Council has met its Annual and other plan objectives.

1.4 Research Method

A total of 2010 households were selected using a "stratified random" technique. These households were given a questionnaire to fill in and return to the Council. The stratification method used was the City's GIS map showing the number of households in each suburb. Suburbs were grouped together so that they contained similar numbers of households, 28 such groupings were made and each grouping was allocated 60 questionnaires. A total of 1680 questionnaires were hand delivered to households in the main metropolitan area of the city. A further 330 of households were selected at random from the electoral rolls for the Green Island-Saddle Hill, Waikouaiti Coast and Taieri wards, and were sent a questionnaire in the mail. Thus 2010 questionnaires were delivered.

Households approached to take part in the survey were asked to have the person in their household “who had had the most recent birthday and who was aged 15 or older” fill in the questionnaire and post it back in the freepost envelope supplied. The 330 questionnaires posted to outlying areas, asked that the person to whom the questionnaire was addressed, fill in the questionnaire.

1.5 Sample and response rate

Questionnaire distribution began on March 26th and was completed by April 8th. The survey was closed-off on June 1st. A total of 897 completed questionnaires were returned in time to be analysed. This is a 45% response rate and compares favourably the 41% response rate achieved in 2005, 36% in 2004 and 39% in 2003. It is felt that this year’s decision to produce the questionnaire in colour contributed to the increased response rate. 897 returned questionnaires gives a margin of error of + or – 2.7% at the 90% level of confidence.

A comparison of the demographic profile of the sample obtained for the residents’ opinion survey, with that of the city as measured in the 2001 census, is shown below.

	2006 residents’ opinion survey	2001 census of Dunedin city
Percent Male	43	48
Percent Female	56	52
Percent European	90	93
Percent Maori	2	6
Percent employed (either full or part-time)	56	58
Percent aged over 65 years	28	16*

*Census figure adjusted after excluding people aged under 15 years, (People under 15 were not included in the ROS survey)

1.6 The interpretation of results

Where the percentage results for questions do not total 100% exactly, the reason for this is a rounding error.

When interpreting the results the reader must always be aware of the margin of error (approximately  $\pm 3\%$ ); which means that a score of say 55% really represents a range from 52% to 58% and that the “true score” lies somewhere within that range.

In many cases it is more appropriate to look at the “dissatisfaction rating” than the “satisfaction rating”. Some things that the Council does or provides, simply aren’t important to residents on a daily basis. If it isn’t important to someone, then unless they have been particularly annoyed or pleased, then their attitude is going to be one of complete indifference and their answer will be “neither satisfied nor dissatisfied” or “don’t know”. A good example of this is question 144 (see appendix 8.1); The CSA’s satisfaction rating is 25% (table 37), but the vast majority of people answered “neutral or don’t know” (74%). What really matters is that only 2% of respondents were dissatisfied. The simple fact is that 74% of respondents either don’t know, don’t care, have no opinion or are neutral... and there is really nothing CSA can or should do about that.

1.7 Comparing the 2006 results with results from previous years’ surveys

1.7.1 Comparisons with results prior to 2003

It is not really possible to make a valid comparison between the 2006 survey and those surveys conducted prior to 2003 because significant changes were made to the survey design in 2003. Since 2003, surveys have included an extra point on the satisfaction scale. The introduction of the mid-point; “Neither satisfied nor dissatisfied” means that respondents who were in years prior to 2003, forced to answer either “satisfied” or “dissatisfied” were, after 2003, able to more accurately express their true opinion and answer “neither”. The fact that in for example, sections D and E (questions 145 to 158; see appendix 8.1) often more than one quarter of respondents chose the “neither satisfied nor dissatisfied” option demonstrates how important it is to provide this neutral option... clearly it is the preferred answer for a significant number of people.

People who answered either “very satisfied” or “very dissatisfied” are unlikely to be influenced by the introduction of the neutral mid-point because their chosen answer was one point distant from the newly introduced mid point. Thus it would be possible to make a valid comparison between 2006 and results for the years prior to 2003 if you were to only look at the “Very satisfied” and “Very dissatisfied” figures.

1.7.2 Comparisons with 2003, 2004 and 2005

As the 2006 survey questionnaire was almost identical to the ones used in 2003, 2004 and 2005 it is quite possible to make a valid comparison between the two years' results. With a margin of error of approximately, + or – 3% we would ideally look for differences between the years of at least 6% (two scores x 3%) to be sure that the difference was statistically significant. However, it is reasonable to assume if a score has increased or decreased by at least 3 percentage points, that it is evidence of a genuine change in the satisfaction rating. Thus when interpreting tables 78 to 82 the reader should look for changes greater than 3% (NB. Those measures where the change between 2005 and 2006 has been greater than 3% have been listed in the summary in section 2.2).

1.8 Additional analysis of results

Additional analysis of the survey results is available from either J. D. Bell & Associates (contact details on the front cover of this report) or from the DCCs Business Improvement section (Phone 474 3386). If cross-tabulations are required please refer to the question numbers in the actual questionnaire (appendix 8.1).
